

Baskerville School has a role in providing information about organisations that provide advice and support to your child and your family

We recognise that our students have a right to a social life and require access to sports and social clubs to live full and healthy lives. They, like any young person, need social experiences outside of the home to develop their social skills, develop interests that they can pursue in their adult life and to become members of their community.

Baskerville School has an Inclusion Manager who is able to signpost you to organisations that can provide guidance and services to your family. The Inclusion Manager can give you information about colleges, support organisations and holiday schemes. Together with the school's independent careers adviser, the Inclusion Manager has an active role in supporting students' transitions into the school and into adult life. She keeps in touch with students after they have left school to enable the school to assess how effective the education at Baskerville School is for the students.

We also have a parent support group lead by our Educational Psychologist where parents can discuss their child's behaviours and vulnerabilities that pose a challenge for families. The purpose is to help parents share experiences and consider alternative ways of thinking.

Baskerville School has close links with the Child and Adolescent Mental Health Services (CAMHS) and can provide information to parents about their role and how they can access their services.

Where parents consider that despite the school's best efforts, the school can no longer meet their child's needs, the Inclusion Manager and the SENCO can provide information about the rights of students and their families to appeal against the decisions of the Local Authority.
